Walking the party plank

Ed Rollins, a forever strategist, possibly starting with Thomas Jefferson, says: “Politics needs strategy. An old boxer, I don’t intimidate easily. First, analyze your candidate. Anticipate what the other side can do. Make a control system. Nixon told me: ‘Every day something will come up. Keep your head clear. Be a war general.’

“I had 700 people working for me but I only dealt with the president. I restricted access to me. And worked to discipline my candidate. Also necessary to investigate your opposition. Get in the helicopter, on the boat, look personally at what’s happening, make decisions on the spot.

“Biden’s the old guard. Representing a very small state for 50 years. His game’s only to give away more stuff. He is what he always was. No Commander-in-Chief, never chosen to lead in the Senate. No world leader. But people don’t care about infrastructure. They care about inflation. Immigration. Trump can’t get younger or sharper but he definitely has a chance at re-election.

“So did I ever screw up? Yeah. Like in a controversy on black voters, which became a big controversy. People went after me. Cost me lots of money. It was very difficult.”

And now, here comes trouble

Per specialists:

Anyone can buy a drone, fit with a grenade, attack anything and not get caught. Nothing’s safe now. Monsters can blow up a car driver, apartment dweller, an inauguration — even a sports stadium.

Also. Finland and Sweden are NATO’s first new members in several years. Why now? Worrying about war widening into Europe? Or something bigger? Insiders may know before the public does.

I like this: "Our infrastructure's inability is in crisis. Is this all a test run for something bigger?". I wonder too. We're so hooked up electronically via internet and the 'electric grid' that any disruption could crash our economy and our lives for that matter. Sure, buy EVs even though the ...

Yes, very true.

China, Iran, North Korea (et al) are currently planning our electronic destruction.

They won't have to work too hard since Joe Biden is an absentee president.

I'm sure that spy balloon (from last year) that collected our military base information has been a great resource for the co...

That's what the Democrats do: import immigrants and buy votes, ad infinitum.

Also, the Supreme Court must stop Biden from circumventing their ruling on “cancelling” student loans.

Biden is using every loophole to pay for votes, up to and including defrauding the American taxpayer on a daily basis.

Given the fact that China flew two balloons, that we know of, across our country, I'd say they got a pretty good map of the infrastructure.

Nothing to see here folks...
